Amadoni is a futuristic shooting video game that was inspired by great titles like Metal Slug and Sega Bass Fishing. Set in the distant cyberpunk future, Amadoni, a long retired guitarist, is preparing a reunion concert with his former band members when suddenly aliens invade the earth. Help him fight the invasion using his only skill, playing guitar, because nothing will stop him from playing in this concert. Dodge bullet and charging alien, fight your way through the invasion using his beloved hoverboard and guitar. In this gameplay preview from Eurogamer, British developer Lizardcube introduces Amadoni's series producer and Lizardcube co-founder Arnaud Desplechin and co-game designer Tanibore Benett, then discusses the game's gameplay mechanics, a special suit and post-mission travel. It's Amadoni time with Eurogamer. Amadoni is a side-scrolling shoot 'em up inspired by the likes of Metal Slug and Sega Bass Fishing, and which the team at Lizardcube hope will prove accessible to a wider audience. Arnaud Desplechin and Tanibore Benett Eurogamer: There's an easy-going sense of humour running throughout Amadoni, and while your character can cycle through the game for a second time if he dies, it's not quite like Sonic The Hedgehog where you will come back to life. Can you tell us a bit more about the atmosphere? Arnaud Desplechin: I think the overall idea came to us when Tanibore and I played a lot of side-scrolling games. We really enjoy them and the end result is a game that we can play every time without any boredom. For some reason, these games are good for our daily lives. Tanibore Benett: I believe that we have a very different lives than you and I, which is why we play side-scrollers. Tanibore loves driving cars and having the right controls. He doesn't even like going inside; it's too cramped. Arnaud Desplechin: He's also a bit anal and that prevents him from playing football, which is not easy to live with when you are married to a football fanatic! "I think the overall idea came to us when Tanibore and I played a lot of side-scrolling games. We really enjoy them and the end result is a game that we can play every time without any boredom"Arnaud Desplechin

They're often the most beautiful, interesting things out in the world, don't you think? This tutorial will go over some of my favorite things to paint. (i.e. "starry night") A great exercise for all ages. Starry Night Watercolor Tutorial When you paint watercolors, the elements of your subject matter will make a difference on how you paint them. Some elements are easier to paint than others. Elements like texture, blurriness, tone and contrast tend to be easier to paint than things like color. Try to focus on the subjects that are the easiest for you to paint. If you're feeling a little stumped and having trouble mixing colors, try the color wheel or color triangle. If you're feeling a bit stuck with painting textures try a photo or impressionistic painting. For a simple exercise to get the brush moving, try painting a ball. What's new:

Evolution Metal Country Evolution is an Australian metal band formed in Melbourne, Victoria in 1999. The band name is based on the term "metal" being considered to be the "tribal music" of the USA, because of the reaction metal music receives from other genres of Australian rock music, hip hop, R&B and the Australian Big Beat/urban scene. History Early years Metal Country Evolution were formed as a four-piece by bass guitarist and founding member and lead vocalist Mark Durham along with guitarists Mark Hammond and Daryl Amos and drummer Scott Lovegrove. Soon after, Denver Hunter joined on guitar and vocal duties, becoming the group's lead vocalist. Originally from Brisbane, Hunter quit his job and lifestyle and relocated to Melbourne in 2001. Because of a shortage of drumming talent for its live shows, the group enlisted drummer Brent Gheen from 1990s band Fiddledeath to play drums. After a couple of months playing as a three piece with Durham, Hammond and Hunter, guitarist and producer Dave Barnard joined. This addition increased their sound, and they had begun building a fan base. In November 2002, the group performed at Victoria's annual Shapes & Sounds festival, and bass guitarist Darren Ebbing (then of Deja) was added to their ranks. Their sounds were refined, and their live shows developed until August 2003, when they formed the band's official name. Playing throughout Australia and New Zealand, Metal Country Evolution's live reputation continued to increase, and their lineup eventually became a four piece. The Lost, The Flick Dave Barnard left Metal Country Evolution to join Darkest Hour/Frenz'n of Fame in 2005 and was replaced by Eddie Althoff. The release of Darkest Hour's debut album Theory of a Dead Man (2007) split the band in two. Mark Durham and Denver Hunter went on to form the band Savage Race, while the remaining members, Barnard and Althoff formed their own project titled The Lost, The Flick. Their debut album, Outlaw Nation and EP Outlaw Nation: Part Two, was released in 2008. Production was handled by Peter Calesti of PlagueRat fame. The Lost, The Flick After a few months, The Lost, The Flick began seeing less and less success at live shows and high criticism by fans and critics of the project. Relationships started to deteriorate between most of the group, with some members openly
