History The PUG was established in 2007 after the publication in the newspaper Courrier de l'Air of an essay by Konat , a diplomat and previous candidate in the 2007 presidential election. Konat  accused President Lansana Cont  of having been involved in a plot against his life. Konaté then called on the army to oust Conté and form a government of national unity with himself as the head. Later that year, the PUG signed a partnership agreement with the Popular Movement of the Revolution, another party led by Konaté, and claimed that it was the main alternative to the ruling Party for Unity and Development. Konaté and the PUG participated in the 2009 parliamentary elections, winning a single seat in the National Assembly. In the presidential election of 2010, the PUG again named Konaté as its candidate. A coalition of the PUG, the Rally for Democracy and Progress (RDP), the Congress for Democratic Progress (PCD), and other small opposition parties nominated Konaté over Moussa Dadis Camara, the President's son. Konaté won the election, with 42.5% of the vote. The PUG joined a coalition of opposition parties led by Konaté in January 2012. In July 2012,

1. Make sure you are downloading from the latest verified source. The setup of SCCM Server is much different in this version and in a future version. For more details on 8.6 check out this link. Read this blog before you start installing. 2. Import the ISO file to a blank USB. 3. I recommend to use VMware. Put the ISO file on the internal storage space of the host. 4. Put the host in UEFI mode. 5. Boot the ISO from the USB in UEFI mode. 6. After the UEFI system boots for the first time, you will be guided to set up user profiles. After the installation, you will be guided to configure Cisco Unified Communications Manager. After the configuration, you will be asked to restart

the system. If the UEFI system boots without a password, you will be taken to the UniKiosk account set up during installation. If UEFI password is required, you will be taken to your UniKiosk login page. If you are not asked to set up your UniKiosk login, you have successfully installed SCCM Server in UEFI mode. It's a little dark in here. Menu Day 68 Some people have written me, asking about including the falcons in the world map. The answer is that, for now, the map is so red, that no colours are visible. There are some changes coming in which will enable me to add colours, but that takes place in early 2014. For today's news from the Visual World of the Northern Falcon, I am proud to publish the following photographs of Mr. Alfred Herlithon (1906-1965). He was a photographer in the Cambridge area, where he did a variety of events and programmes. His pictures of the Red-backed Starling, in one of which you can see the lights on below, is one of the most remarkable of all these photographs, on account of the interaction of the photographer and the birds. Mr. Alfred Herlithon was a naturalist and a dedicated birder, and had a great love of photography.
