In manufacturing of a semiconductor device, a process of manufacturing and inspecting a semiconductor wafer, which is a substrate to be treated, is performed in multiple lots by a processing apparatus (e.g., a plasma processing apparatus) which processes a semiconductor wafer in multiple lots. In the processing apparatus, a number of semiconductor wafers are disposed in a single wafer cassette. Each of the semiconductor wafers in the wafer cassette is arranged to be sequentially processed. Generally, in the processing apparatus, processing conditions of the semiconductor wafers in the wafer cassette are not changed even if the semiconductor wafers in the wafer cassette are transferred to another processing apparatus. However, in a case where the processing conditions of the semiconductor wafers in the wafer cassette vary according to a lot, when the wafer cassette is transferred between a plurality of processing apparatuses, the processing apparatus cannot perform stable processing on the wafer cassette. As a technology for reducing the variation of the processing conditions in the processing apparatus, there has been proposed a method which determines that the processing apparatus operates stably when it is found that a processing recipe is appropriate for a lot of processed semiconductor wafers (see, e.g., Japanese Patent Application Laid-open No. H10-108137). For example, in a case where a conventional wafer cassette includes a large number of semiconductor wafers, it is difficult to find out all semiconductor wafers from which a processing recipe suitable for each lot can be obtained. Thus, there is a problem that a lot which is not processed or a lot having a small number of semiconductor wafers is processed. g e r ? 3 7 4 5 What is the fifth root of 3 1 4 1 6 6 6 3 3 to the nearest integer ? 3 7 What is
