Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a memory device, and more particularly, to a flash memory device. 2. Description of the Related Art Recently, as portable electronic devices such as cellular telephones, portable game machines, and portable media players have become common, a demand for flash memory has increased. In general, memory flash is classified into NOR type memory flash and NAND type memory flash. The NOR type memory flash stores data in memory cells using hot electrons, and data is read by causing a drain current to flow. The NAND type memory flash stores data in memory cells using Fowler-Nordheim tunneling currents (FN currents). As shown in FIGS. 1 and 2, the NOR type flash memory device includes a source 14, a memory cell, and a select transistor ST. The memory cell stores data "1" or "0" by accumulating a predetermined amount of electrons in a floating gate 17 or not. The select transistor ST is connected between the source 14 and the memory cell, and is controlled to selectively transmit the electrons accumulated in the floating gate 17 to the source 14 or not. The NAND type flash memory device includes a plurality of strings ST0 to ST3. The strings ST0 to ST3 are connected in series between a string select transistor STS and a ground line GND, as shown in FIG. 3. The strings ST0 to ST3 are connected to one select transistor STS. The select transistor STS is connected between a string line SL and the ground line GND. As shown in FIGS. 1 and 2, the NOR type flash memory device includes a source 14, a select transistor ST, a memory cell, and a plurality of word lines WL1 to WL8. The memory cells are connected in series between the source 14 and a ground line GND. The word lines WL1 to WL8 are connected to the gates of the memory cells. The select transistor ST is connected between the source 14 and the memory cell. The select transistor ST is controlled to selectively transmit the electrons stored in the memory cell to the source
